Province of British Columbia Approves Industry-Led Thermostat Recycling Plan

The Canadian Institute of Plumbing & Heating (CIPH) along with the Heating, Refrigeration & Air Conditioning Institute of Canada (HRAI) with Summerhill Impact has expanded the voluntary "Switch the Stat"[™] program to meet BC's extended producer responsibility regulations for thermostats.

"Switch the Stat"[™] recycles all thermostats. The program has been brought to British Columbia as a mandated, responsible, manufacturer-funded program.

The plan calls for putting thermostat recycling bins into the hands of installers, contractors, wholesalers, distributors, and retailers; i.e. anyone who may have contact with old thermostats.

For CIPH members, having a thermostat recycling bin at your location will make it easier to support your local customers and participate in this program.

What this means to you:

- a. There will be no cost to the contractor, wholesaler or distributor to participate;
- b. Display the bin and your customers just have to put the old thermostats in it;
- c. A bin at your location will drive some traffic to you as you provide this service to the contractor;
- d. The responsibility ultimately falls to the thermostat manufacturers - they are funding the program to recycle old thermostats and divert them from landfills.

If you want to become part of the solution, please register for a recycling bin at your location at:

With approval, implementation is expected to begin as early as July 2010. CIPH will be engaging our allies, Thermal Environmental Comfort Association (TECA) and the Mechanical Contractors Association of BC (MCABC) to take this message out to their members.

CIPH members in BC consist of over 137 plumbing and heating wholesale distribution locations that come into contact with thousands of plumbing & heating contractors, hydronic installers, general contractors, and renovation professionals. Every single one of these professionals removes old thermostats off the wall at the jobsite.

The more locations and professionals participating, the more successful the program will be.

The Canadian Institute of Plumbing & Heating is a not-for-profit trade association.
